1. Education

10TV EYEWITNESS NEWS: “10 Investigates: School Security.” Doors unlocked, doors wide open... 10 Investigates walked right into Central Ohio schools. See what happened when 10 Investigates put school security to the test. Ted Hart reports. (L/N) 11/02/06, 11pm; TRT: 4:00.

10TV EYEWITNESS NEWS: “Schools Closed for Staph Infection.” When a dangerous staph infection turned up in the student at Nelsonville-York High School, the superintendent shut down the entire district for a day to sanitize all the schools. Andrea Cambern reports (L/N) 10/10/06, 5pm; TRT: 1:20

10TV EYEWITNESS NEWS: “School Bus Injuries.” A new study from Columbus Children’s Hospital finds that 17,000 kids are hurt each year while riding a school bus, and most of them are ages ten to fourteen. The report recommends that a bus monitor watch the kids, and that seatbelts be added to buses. Andrea Cambern reports (L/N) 11/6/06; 5pm TRT: 1:33.

DR. PHIL SHOW: “Great School Debate.” Parents want the best for their children, but what’s the best way to educate them? Dr. Phil’s guests face off in a debate about whether to school, homeschool or unschool. Dana and her husband, Joe, call themselves radical unschoolers. They say education happens as a side effect of life, and they don’t believe in tests, curriculums or grades. Are their three kids learning what they need to know? Then, RaeAnn says public schools are death traps and wants to homeschool her children. Her husband, Steve, says their kids are safer at school than they are at home. Can this couple reach a compromise? Plus, Nicole feels like an outcast at 26. She says she hated being homeschooled, and couldn’t relate to other kids. Dr. Phil weighs in on this important discussion. (S/PA) 11/24/06.

DR. PHIL SHOW: “Homework Hell.” When it comes to helping kids with school assignments, some parents just don’t make the grade. Angela says her 12-year-old son, Mason, takes up to six hours to finish his homework, and she says she can’t stop nitpicking. Her mother, Gayle, says Angela acts like a drill sergeant, and has called Mason "lazy and useless." What’s behind Angela’s frustration? Then, tempers rise as Angela feels her parenting skills are being criticized. Find out the conversation Dr. Phil has with her during the break. Plus, Dr. Phil gives Angela a test of his own, and Dr. Frank Lawlis, author of The I.Q. Answer, weighs in. (S/PA) 12/7/06.

2. Youth

DR. PHIL SHOW: “Divorcing the Family.” What can you do when you lose control of your kids and your household? Peggy was so fed up with the chaos caused by her 17-year-old twin boys' behavior – the yelling, tantrums, cursing, disrespect, fighting and the resulting strain on her marriage -- that her solution was to divorce one of her sons from the family. However, by the time Peggy filed the paperwork to emancipate her son, it was rejected, so now she says she's forced to be responsible for him until he turns 18. Can Dr. Phil convince Peggy and her husband to accept responsibility for their deteriorating home situation, and inspire the teens to help calm the chaos? Or, is divorcing a family member really a last-ditch option? (S/PA) 10/12/06.

DR. PHIL SHOW: “Teen Plastic Surgery.” Last year alone, more than a quarter of a million kids had plastic surgery, and it's a growing trend. Nineteen-year-old Krystal says she'll never feel beautiful until she gets breast implants. Her mother, Kristi, and her sister, Katie, have both had plastic surgery -- and want even more -- but strongly object to Krystal doing it. What does Dr. Phil think? Then, Diana wants her daughter, Bri, to get plastic surgery on her neck, arms, stomach, thighs and breasts -- and Bri is only 12 years old. Diana believes it will make Bri prettier and help her fit in among her peers. What message is this sending to Bri? Plus, one teen's plastic surgery nightmare taught her a valuable lesson -- the hard way. She hopes her story will be a warning to other girls before they go under the knife. (S/PA) 10/13/06.

The Dr. Phil House has become the detox center for Sarah, who is monitored medically as she goes through painful withdrawal symptoms from her addiction to crack cocaine and heroin. Her sister, Tecoa, has only been clean for two weeks, and struggles to deal with her own drug cravings while six months pregnant and providing support for her detoxing sibling. Is she able to fight off the cravings or does she give in? And, is Tecoa sabotaging Dr. Phil’s efforts to get Sarah clean? While her daughters deal with their addictions, Cindy tries to learn the fine line between supporting and enabling. Dr. Phil meets with the entire family and shows the twins a look into their future, depending on the decisions they make now. Is it enough to scare them straight? (S/PA) 11/27/06.

DR. PHIL SHOW: “Gen Rx.” Parents, did you know you might be your kids’ drug dealer? Did you know they could be getting high from products in your pantry, under your sink, or in your medicine cabinet? Dana says her 16-year-old son, Josh, has been experimenting with over-the-counter drugs. She says he’s downed bottles of cold medications, packs of cold pills and an entire bottle of mouthwash — all in an effort to get high. See what drastic measures she took to bring Josh to the show. Then, 21-year-old Christina says she can’t start her day without taking half a bottle of cough medicine. Her four-year addiction to robo-tripping is spiraling so far out of control, she fears her days are numbered. What will it take for Christina to kick her habit? Plus, a mom whose son died from an overdose of over-the-counter drugs shares her tragic story. (S/PA) 12/18/06.

Katie says when she and her husband, Joe, were dating, he wined and dined her, but when they got married, he became so cheap that she had to buy her own wedding ring, and he refused to take her on a honeymoon. When Katie lost over 40 pounds and wanted to buy clothes that fit, she says Joe told her to just gain the weight back. Joe says he has to control all of Katie's spending, or they would end up in the poorhouse. Is Joe really the penny-pincher Katie says he is, or is Katie's spending the real problem? Next, Ericka says her friend, Carlana, has "caviar taste with a tuna fish budget," and that if she doesn't learn to control her shopaholic ways, she'll end up on the street. Carlana says she deserves everything she buys -- designer clothes, over 100 pairs of shoes, and the TV in her car -- even if she can't afford them. Carlana's spending has gotten so bad, she had to move back home with her mother, Leonetta. Leonetta joins the show via satellite with all of Carlana's possessions on her lawn. Don't miss her shocking ultimatum to her daughter! (S/PA) 10/20/05.

DR. PHIL SHOW: “New Orleans Scam.” First, they lost their belongings in Hurricane Katrina, then, these guests say they paid thousands of dollars to a construction company that never made good on contracts to repair their homes. Seventy-eight-year-old Marion says she paid $4,000 to contractors who took her money and ran. Lean, 74, says she lost $29,000 to the same company. Julie and Robert say they paid the same contractors almost $50,000, and Lenny, 83, says he was taken for almost twice that amount. Does one of the contractors take responsibility in a phone showdown with Dr. Phil? Plus, Dr. Phil teams up with some special guests to give the hurricane survivors a few surprises. (S/PA) 10/26/06.

DR. PHIL SHOW: “Dr. Phil Scam Pt. 1.” You hear about scams all the time – e-mails and voicemail messages claiming you've won valuable prizes. But Dr. Phil is outraged by what some con artists are doing to him, his family and his viewers. A group of scammers have been baiting unsuspecting viewers with a phony 800-number, then taking their money in exchange for phone therapy sessions with Dr. Phil and Robin. These bogus Dr. Phil staffers were asking for anywhere from $375 to $1,000 for a consultation.

One viewer, Renee, fell prey to their tricks. She wrote to Dr. Phil for advice to save her marriage, but ended up in the middle of a major con job. Then, Robin makes a call to the scammers. It's a conversation you don't want to miss! Plus, find out what happens when Dr. Phil sends private investigator Harold Copus to set up a sting to ask some tough questions! (S/PA) 11/9/06.

DR. PHIL SHOW: “Nightmare Brides and Grooms.” Contemporary weddings have turned into five-star productions, with couples pulling out all the stops to shine on their special day. But what happens when the bride- or groom-to-be starts making diva-like demands? Mike and Jamie agreed to a small Vegas wedding, but that went out the window when Jamie switched her gown three times, rented a limo to drive her one block and upgraded her engagement ring. Mike says that Jamie also made him un-invite all of his friends and cancelled his bachelor party! Are Jamie's antics a hint of what's to come in their marriage? Then, Nastassia complains that her husband-to-be, Richard, is cheap. She says he wants her to buy bridal flowers from the grocery store, have her mom sew her gown and even schedule the wedding before year's end so he can get a tax write-off! Will Richard's tightwad ways force Nastassia to call off the wedding? (S/PA) 11/21/06.

DR. PHIL SHOW: “Spoiled and Entitled.” It's holiday time again, and parents everywhere are figuring out how they're going to afford what's on their kids' Christmas list. Theresa is a single mother who is extremely stressed out because she says her 17-year-old daughter, Bailie, is spoiled. Bailie expects her mom to buy her new clothes, a computer, purses -- much more than Theresa can afford. Theresa says that Bailie even leaves notes around the house saying, "Clean my room!" How has Theresa, who's unemployed, been able to keep up with Bailie's demands? She reveals a dark secret that she's been keeping from everyone, including Bailie. And what does Bailie want most from her mom that she's never gotten? Then, 24-year-old Katie says that she's always been handed everything she wants, and if she doesn't get her way, she begs and whines to get her dad to foot the bill. He still pays for her gas, insurance, furniture and clothing.

Now, Katie says her 4-year-old daughter is growing up to be just like her, and it's Grandpa's fault. Plus, Dr. Phil and Robin have signed on to be the national spokespeople for Toys for Tots. To kick off this year's holiday toy drive, they head to Texas Motor Speedway to cheer on the UPS Store/Toys for Tots racing team. Find out how you can win the racing suits they wore, while contributing to the Toys for Tots Foundation at the same time! (S/PA) 11/30/06.
